

Healthfuse and TPC Team Up to Improve Vendor Management for Hospitals and Health Systems

TPC Selects Healthfuse as Vendor Management Resource for all Member Health Systems

MILWAUKEE, August 23, 2018— Healthfuse, the industry leader in managing and sourcing revenue cycle vendors for hospitals and health systems, has been selected by TPC, a partnership of ten independent health systems in four states with over $1B in purchasing volume, to be the vendor management resource for all TPC Members.

“The vast majority of revenue cycle leaders aren’t sure what they’re getting out of their growing number of vendors,” says Nick Fricano, president and chief executive officer of Healthfuse. “We provide complete transparency into outsourced accounts, work with vendors and health systems to strengthen processes and relationships and increase accountability and trust through a comprehensive suite of best practice tools. TPC is serious about driving value, and we look forward to helping build a successful revenue cycle program for its Members.”

Healthfuse combines technology, analytics and research to improve vendor performance and help healthcare organizations establish revenue cycle best practices. Their platform automates technical and administrative vendor management activities that can increase vendor collections by 20-30 percent and reduce vendor costs by 10-20 percent. Based in part on Healthfuse’s performance in helping secure over $16M in savings and performance improvement for two TPC Members, the TPC membership committed to implement Healthfuse across all Member health systems.

Implementation began late last month and will be completed for the majority of TPC Members by mid-November.

“In today’s dynamic revenue cycle environment, managing mergers and acquisitions, changing reimbursement structures and increasing patient pay, we want to help our Members remain independent and financially viable in their communities,” says Cody Waldrop, TPC vice president of revenue cycle. “With Healthfuse, we offer a high impact solution to our Members that not only looks at the expense side of the equation, but also at the revenue side. Their 100 percent audit capability and extensive industry knowledge has already been a tremendous resource for our Members. The results that Healthfuse has generated have us excited at the opportunity for the other TPC Members.”
